

COMMON DEFENCE, when threatened with foreign invasion, "though the enemy were at our gates, battering down the walls of the Capitol." Such men must not be expected to advocate sound opinions. And when we find that the great Nullifier introduced, and Daniel Webster defended the deposite law, we can understand why the great and efficient means for regulating the currency—their up-in—which the Bank said "THE STABILITY of the currency almost exclusively depends"—was voted down; and why in its stead we had a law tempting the deposite banks to overissue, and removing forty millions of deposite, by ten millions every three months, and distributing it among the states. The object was to shift the balances of the Banks and the balances of domestic exchange suddenly, that the collection of the amount should bring about a suspension of specie payment. Thus the Bank Cass is revenged upon the people for refusing a re-charter; and the bank-hired Senators, whose lofty aspirations to the Presidency have been so bitterly disappointed, hope to scourge the people, who despise such traitors, into submission.

If "those who were in the possession of property" approve of the despicable whig financial trick played upon the people by the deposite law, they cannot make others approve it. Much less can such men as Webster, Calhoun and Nicholas Biddle ever command the affections, respect or confidence of the people of the United States; and any project which meets their approbation will, from that fact, be reasonably and naturally supposed to contain some treachery in it. That the intention of these Calhounians in shaping the deposite law was to bring about a suspension of specie payment, is evident from the particular pains which both these patriots took, in advocating it, to disclaim all responsibility of its future effects, and to disclaim all intention of taking any lead in the matter, although they not only led, but succeeded in making others follow their lead. Let any man read their speeches—see how they flatter the administration members, how they pretended to come into the views of these members, and how they hinted to their brother whigs their meaning. Mr. Webster was so delighted with the success of his plans, that he remarked in regard to the Deposite Banks, that

"It might possibly be thought IMPORTANT to their stockholders and customers to be informed whether, in CASE OF A FAILURE OR INSOLVENCY, the priority of the United States would prevail, as in other cases, to the payment of all other debts and claims. It is certainly my opinion, sir, that we are running great hazards with the currency of the country. I see no well assured reliance for its safety in this system of deposite banks, regulated as well as they may be. Nevertheless, regulation is necessary; may, it is indispensable; and some present benefit, at least, would arise, I am persuaded, from the passage of a proper law."

Here was an indirect confession, that the regulations by which the United States Bank had checked overissues, which were embodied in the 24th and 25th articles of the laws of the Bank, as the necessary and proper means of regulating the currency, and upon the proper execution of which, the Bank had openly published that the stability of the currency almost exclusively depends, would be useful. But instead of embodying them into the deposite system as the administration wished to do, and imposing the execution of these "proper laws" upon the Secretary of the Treasury and the President (in the same manner as the Bank had entrusted the execution of them to its executive, when it was the regulator of the currency), he chose to vote them down. "The Bank shall rule or we will ruin you," was the fit principle for such men to act upon.

The Advertiser would do well to get ready to defend its prodigal political associates, instead of attacking General Jackson and his successor—men whose characters are too lofty to be reached by whigs, or the friends of Nullification, Harbottle Conventions, or Mob Law.

From the Richmond Enquirer.
DEATH OF NATHANIEL MACON.

The Warrenton, N. C. Reporter of Saturday last, comes shrouded in mourning for the death of one of the most virtuous and illustrious men, who graced our country. The Reporter announces the melancholy intelligence in the following simple terms:—
"It is with feelings of deep regret we have to announce the death of the Hon. NATHANIEL MACON. He departed this life at his residence in this county, on Thursday morning last, the 29th of June, in the 83rd year of his age."

The whole nation will sincerely share in this deep regret. Mr. Macon was one of those patriots who fill a space in the nation's eye. He was a long time a member of Congress from the State of North Carolina. He was in the House of Representatives in the trying crisis of '98—'99—and for many years afterwards. He was once Speaker of the House—and he subsequently served as a member of the Senate of the United States. At all times he was the firm Republican—the pure Patriot—the excellent citizen—the honest man. No one ever more completely realized the elevated character of the Roman poet, "Iustum et tenacem propositum virum." But we forbear—we leave it to other pens to do justice to Nathaniel Macon.

He was the bosom friend of Jefferson and of Madison—no one was more devoted to him, than John Randolph—no one had more intimate acquaintance with him, than he did upon the most intimate acquaintance. In the paper which he wrote for his last will in January, 1832, he leaves the following memorable tribute in honor of his friend:—
"To Nathaniel Macon I give and bequeath my oldest high silver candlesticks, my silver punch table with whalebone handle, a pair of silver cans with handles, and my crest engraved thereon, my hard metal dishes that have my crest of J. R. in old English letters engraved thereon, also the plates with the same engraving, the choice of four of my best young mares and geldings, and the gold watch by Roskell, that was Tudor's with the gold chain; and may every blessing attend him, the best and purest and wisest man that I ever knew."

We have made the following abstract showing the present condition of the Banks of Alabama:—

Circulation	$5,569,026
Due to other banks	$2,462,401
Due from other banks	1,251,952

A Naval Court Martial has been ordered to be convened at the Navy Yard, Gosport, Va., On Monday, 10th of July, for the trial of Commander William Ramsey. The Court will be composed of the following officers:—

Commander Lewis Warrington, President.
Commodore Joseph J. Nicholson,
Captain Foxhall A. Parker,
Captain Charles W. Skinner,
Captain Beverly Kennon,
Commander Thomas T. Webb,
Lieut. Wm. Armstrong,
Lieut. D. Farragut,
Walter F. Jones, Judge Advocate.

Ohio Loan.—The canal fund of the state of Ohio for 500,000 dollars, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, redeemable in 1856, was taken by Prime, Ward & King, at a premium of 12 57-100 per cent, or 112 57-100 dollars for each 1000 dollars of stock. It will be recollected that the state of Ohio pays its interest at the rate of 109 dollars in city bank notes for 100 dollars of interest, being an equivalent for specie.—N. Y. Post.

Difference between Poetry and Fact.—The New York Courier and Enquirer has published some "Lines written after beholding an eagle, sitting tamely on a perch, amidst the throng and bustle of the celebration of the fourth of July, in New York;" the following is the first stanza:—

"Dweller in lofty climates, pure and high—
Thou glidest in sensuous ease, where the sun
Flings his light in arrows through the burning sky
And searcheth all his fierce eye glances upon:
Thou plumed and glorious creature, King of birds,
Lone and majestic in thy realm of air—
How comest thou tamely sit and hear men's words
And meet the crowd's ignoble, wandering stare?"

To this the New Era replies—"We saw the eagle in Wall street, and can testify that he could not help being in that wonted region of eagles and half-eagles. The unhappy 'glorious creature, King of birds,' was dead and stuffed! His royal talons were actually fixed to his perch by vile glue, and he could not get into the 'seas empyreal' to save his soul!"

The Democratic State Convention of Vermont was held at Montpelier on the 28th ult. and unanimously nominated Wm. C. BRADLEY for Governor, JOHN S. PETTIBONE for Lieutenant Governor, and CHARLES R. CLEAVES for Treasurer. The following gentlemen were chosen State Committee for the ensuing year—Messrs. CHARLES LINSLEY, HEMAN LOWRY, and JOHN BECKWITH.

A man hung himself at Doylestown, Pa. the other day.—THE REASON—"He had but five cents, a jack-knife, and a quid of tobacco in his pocket"—this was enough—a true yankee would have petitioned the Legislature for a bank charter upon such a capital, and then have had more property than many who have succeeded in a similar application.

Walking on the water.—This experiment, which was tried with perfect success to the astonishment of a multitude of beholders on the 4th inst., will be repeated this day, in the deepest part of the channel between Chelsea and the Navy Yard. The advertisement gives the particulars.

When "1776" wishes us to extract an article from another paper, he should furnish us with the copy. We should not, however, have had room to comply with his request, had he done it in the instance he refers to, yet we give him this hint in case he should ask a similar favor again.

Mr Thurber and son were attacked by three men while on their way from Providence to the Pavilion on the night of the 4th instant, and severely beaten; on raising a cry of alarm their assailants made their escape. Mr T. thinks plunder and murder was their object.

The Taunton Gazette sends us two papers—one directed to the Post and another to the Statesman—this is unnecessary, as one copy will answer our purpose as well as two, and the Gazette is too good a journal to have any of its numbers wasted.

The New York Post pays the following high compliment to Gentleman George (Barrett)—

"He has long been an ornament to the profession, and a model in private life."

What can the reason be with the whigs for wishing to remove the LIBERTY POLE on the Common? Don't they like the looks of these old democratic flag-staffs?

The Revenue.—We learn that the duties accruing at this port in June, 1836, were about 365,000. In June, 1837, they were about 174,000.

Deficit this year, $191,000.

Time enough has not elapsed since the great celebration in Newburyport, for the editor of the Herald to tell correctly whose son Daniel Webster is.

We are sorry that our friend of the Gloucester Democrat has so great an antipathy to bathing—it would improve his constitution if he could overcome his prejudice.

We are much obliged to a highly esteemed friend for a "Dream"—an admirable libel at the "divine Harriet"—which we shall soon lay before our readers.

A hackman was struck by lightning in New York, last week, and thrown upon the top of his carriage, while his horses were both knocked down—no deaths.

The Captains on the North River are racing their sloops—one of them won $400 on the 4th in one of these contests.

They have had a Regatta on the Potomac—three boats entered for the race—the one steered by Capt. Ramsay, of the Army, came off winner.

The seats gave way in an amphitheatre in a town in Maryland, a short time since, by which accident a young lady had her leg broken; the manager gave her $75 (in skin plasters we suppose) to get it mended with.

The Antimasons of Rhode Island have chosen delegates to the next National Antimasonic Convention. When and where it is to be held?

We have the proceedings of a democratic meeting at Andover, Ms. which we shall publish as soon as possible, and also one from Seaboard.

We shall re-publish the Report of the Fire Department as soon as possible.

Mr Edge, the Pyrotechnist, astonished the New Yorkers as much as Mr Hall did the Bostonians on the 4th.

Mr Hart's theatrical company is doing a smart business at Augusta, Georgia.

The "Parody on the Sleeping Bride" is written so indistinctly that we can't read it.

'And the drink offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of a hin.'—Bible.

Conundrum.—Why was wit like alcohol, at the Marlboro' Hotel dinner? Because it was a great deal talked about but not present.

Another.—Why were the diners at the Marlboro' Hotel like scandalizers? Because they abused the absent spirit.

Harrowing Tale.—The Alton Spectator of the 15th ult. gives a most harrowing account of the wandering and death of a small boy about three years of age, of Edwardsville, Illinois. He wandered from home into the woods bordering upon a creek, into which he was supposed to have fallen and was drowned. He is supposed to have survived four days in the woods, as his tracks were discovered on the fourth day of his disappearance. The absence of the child caused intense interest with the people of the town. The Spectator says there were not less than 400 or 500 persons engaged in searching for the child, on the third and fourth days. He disappeared on Monday, and was found on Friday about 2 o'clock P. M. in the creek, a short distance from where his trail was seen.

A little too fast.—Our friend Hallett, of the Boston Advocate, states first, that Governor Francis is to be a candidate for member of Congress. Next, he publishes his declaration; and nominates Judge Howard for us, in his stead. We had supposed that the democrats of Rhode Island were capable of making their own nominations, and taking care of their own concerns, without the aid of a Massachusetts Editor, and of giving them publicity.—Friend Hallett is at liberty to guess, but he ought not to set down his guess work for fact. No one has been nominated in place of Mr. Sprague, and the conclusions of the Committee are not known. When they are, we shall publish them.—R. I. Herald.

MUNICIPAL COURT.—The Incendiaries.—Wm. C. Crumb and Eugene T. Walker, were acquitted by the Jury. Those who may have read the Reports of the Evidence in the Police Court, may seem surprised at this verdict; but, in the Municipal Court, it was clearly proved, by Watchman Spokesfield, that the matches found under the straw bed, must have set it on fire, if they had been lighted when placed there. These matches, too, were different from those thrown into the vault by Crumb; but were similar to others, which unconsciously disappeared from the room of a neighbor of Brown, who was a principal witness against the prisoners. There was also strong evidence against the credibility of Brown, as a man of veracity. G. W. Phillips, Esq., after disposing of the credibility of Brown, argued with great force, that Brown had manufactured the second portion of the testimony, in order to secure the $1000 reward offered by the City.

In the case of William Wilson, for an attempt to set fire to an old building, at the North End, the Jury have agreed upon a verdict, but it will not be announced till this morning.

Cutting a Joke; or "All's Well that Ends Well."—A Capital Farce in Six Scenes.—Dramatis Personæ—Samuel A. Godding, driver and proprietor of an elegant new hackney coach, and Robert Johnson, John Harris, and William Peterman, three young larks on a spree.

Scene 1st.—Friday Night.—The front of the Lion Theatre—the Larks are seen coming out of the Theatre—then in confab with Coachee—a bargain is struck for a trip to Brighton—the Coach drives off, with the Larks inside.

Scene 2d.—The C-ach halts at Porter's—the Larks descend with great caution for the motion of the Coach (nothing else could positively have done it)—has agitated their nerves, and the horizontal area appears to be an inclined plane, the inclination of which is ever-varying—as they get down, one by one, a barber on the opposite side of the street, strikes up, on his flute, the air—"Such a getting up stairs!"

Scene 3d.—Porter's supper table—the Larks in a high state of salubrity—"O'er all the ills of life victorious."

Scene 4th.—The Larks come into the bar-room, and call for Coachee—tell him where to drive them to their boarding-house—Steady, Steady's the word—their nerves are temporarily in fine trim—the coach they bolt—the door is fastened—Coachee mounts, and away they dash for Boston.

Scene 4th.—Coachee hauls up, according to order—dismounts—opens the coach door—finds the Larks, happy souls, still bound in the embraces of Morpheus—thinks about arousing them—proceeds to perform his benevolent purpose, when, horrid to behold, but, alas, too late, he discovers that they have cut—yes cut—the linings and cushions of his new coach to pieces—For one second Coachee raises his left fore-finger to his left temple—in the other he held the handle of the door, and his whip—A awful pause, ominous of evil—Speechless he stands—he swears not by Heaven, the Throne, nor by the Earth, the Footstool—the dread Third Commandment leaves him, too, inviolate—may not even the Watch call him, man of matelous moderation—"mild as a summer morn"—cool as a cucumber.

Hush—hush—he moves a point, and his eye is fixed in the direction of Leverett street—they glisten with a happy thought—a brilliant conception—his left fore-finger drops from his left temple, and passes to the right side of his chin—his left thumb is placed upon the left side—the finger and thumb are drawn slowly together till they meet on the centre of the chin—with a quick motion, the hand is then withdrawn, and formed into a fist, with the thumb and finger upward—his lips move—"I'll be shot if I don't do that thing," drops from him. He shuts the door—mounts his box, and drives off.

Scene 5th.—The Coach halts in front of Leverett Street Jail—the jail watchman, all muffled up, hails—"Who's there." "Three prisoners," replied the Coachee, now dismounted, and opening the coach door. "By whose orders are they to be committed?" inquires him of the jail. "I take the responsibility," exclaims Coachee, striking a grand Old Hickory attitude. As they are being tumbled out, the Larks sense sensible that they are leaving the coach but suppose that they are going to their own lodgings. The bolts are fastened upon them—the coach drives off—and all around is as serene as moonlight.

Scene 6th.—Saturday Morning—the dungeon—the Larks wake up about Nine—a Deputy Sheriff is standing by, with a Common Pleas writ in his hand, from which he reads, that he is commanded to take their bodies, or property, to answer for their wanton destruction of the Coach. They desire time for a "little cool reflection" and to consider the expediency of joining a Temperance Society. The officers withdraw—and the bolts are again pushed into their evasive receptacles. [The Curt's drops.]

John Quincy Adams will be seventy years of age to-morrow.

The whigs of Maine have nominated Edward Kent for Governor.

The New Orleans Picayune of the 30th says—"The rain is one constant pour—the streets are muddy—the city healthy—the river rising."

The steamboat Ploughboy, Capt. Armstrong, on her passage from Plaquemine to St. Martinville, (La.) burst her boiler, and thus caused the death of three persons, besides severely scalding several others.

New Orleans, June 29.—Monday night was marked by some of the most atrocious acts that the long catalogue of crime possesses. Two deliberate, and cold blooded murders, and a violent endeavour at a third, stained its few hours of darkness.

In the first municipality one of the night guard, a Frenchman named Mole, was most barbarously butchered by some ruffian who must have meditated the act for some time, since the evidence proved that the sufferer was not by a gun, not by a pistol, proving clearly that the villain must have gone home for his weapon of blood. We regret to say the wretch has hitherto escaped detection.

In the second municipality another act of cruel and cool murder was perpetrated by one Bailey, a carpenter, on the person of a Mr. Miller or Muller. The murderer met his victim near the junction of Phillips and Paydres streets, and upbraiding him with some domestic injury the other had done him, told him he would instantly shoot him; so runs the tale. The other begged hard for his life, but finding that useless, turned to fly, when he was shot through the body.

Several persons are said to have been near at the time of the deed, or came up on the instant of its fulfilment, and saw the re-load, but by the time the police came, the murderer had escaped. As yet he has eluded pursuit, but we hope for the credit of our municipality, he will not long remain concealed,—a watchman near the new canal, was also nearly killed by an attack of many infuriated people. DISASTROUS BOAT WRECK.

The passengers of the Rail Road from Utica this afternoon, bring information that the Steamboat Monroe, which left Buffalo on the 19th ultimo, was lost on the Upper Lake.

The Monroe had between 300 and 400 passengers on board, but few of which survived.

News in a Nut Shell.—Figs are ripe, and so are water melons. Chew the former, but es-chew the latter.

No city occurrences worthy of publication this morning.

The slips of yesterday furnish no foreign intelligence whatever.

The rainy weather continues.

No murders committed last night.

The Mississippi is rising.—New Orleans Picayune, 29th June.

Touch of the Romantic.—On the evening of the 4th of July, as a small schooner was running in from the narrows, the steamboat Hercules ran foul of her, and knocked a young lady overboard, who was rapidly being carried away by a strong ebb tide, when the mate of the British brig St. George, who had seen the collision from the quarter-deck of that vessel, most gallantly sprang from the taffrail, caught the half-drowned Yankee beauty in his arms, and succeeded in getting her on board of his own craft.—N. Y. Era.

The Randolph Will Case.—We learn from the Richmond Whig that the special Court of Appeals affirmed, on Monday, the judgment of the General Court, in the Randolph Will Case—Judges Brockenbrough and Mason concurring, and Judge Cabell dissenting. This decision establishes the will of 1821 with the various codicils up to August, 1831, by which the slaves of Mr. Randolph are emancipated.

The National Gazette says:—

"Philadelphians are becoming like the Italians in their love of fantastical displays of this kind. Yesterday resembled a carnival at Venice more than a sober display in the city of Penna. Harlequins, princes, peasants, with representatives of every nation, paraded the streets with bands of music and banners. The 'Crow Club' was headed by a young gentleman in the character of a colossal crow, his feathers, wings, beak and all being complete."

The Exhibitions at the Lion Theatre continue to increase in astonishing variety, as well as exceed in character, every thing ever before attempted in this city. The performances to-night are for the benefit of Mr. A. Cook.

Suicide.—We learn from Briggs's Bulletin that a man named Henry Linow, committed suicide by hanging himself, on Saturday evening, in a house on the corner of Friend and Hanover streets.

The Committee of Arrangements for the late celebration of the Fourth of July at Faneuil Hall, will meet at Concert Hall This Evening at 8 o'clock. The punctual attendance of every member is respectfully requested. July 10th.

NOTICE.—The subscriber, formerly of the Washington Hotel, Lowell, Mass., and more recent of the Franklin House, New England, respectfully acquaints his friends and the public in New England and elsewhere, that he has associated himself with Mr. E. Roberts, of Philadelphia, Pa., known by the firm of Roberts & Mixer, to conduct that country's house calling the M. Van Vernon House, recently put in complete order. He feels warranted in stating that he was never so well prepared to make it comfortable for any man traveling with a family. For particulars of the House see advertisement in another column of this paper. DANIEL MIXER.

A MAN WALKING ON THE WATER.—On MONDAY, 10th inst., the inventor of a mode by which man may walk on the water, with ease and safety, will make a public experiment with his apparatus in the harbor, directly in front of the Chelsea Hotel. He will walk on the water from 6 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and show the practicability of using the fishing rod and towing piece, with his apparatus. The machinery which is composed of iron, copper and brass, will be exhibited at the Chelsea House from 10 till 4 o'clock of the same day. is4q j38

NOTICE.—An adjourned meeting of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association will be held at the Supreme Court Room, Court square, on THURSDAY EVENING next, July 13th, at 8 o'clock, to receive the Report of the Committee on a Convention to be held at Philadelphia in August next, and to attend to such other business as may be presented. A full attendance of the members is requested. J. GORHAM ROGERS, Secy.

BOSTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The members are notified that the semi-annual meeting of the Chamber, will be held on MONDAY next the 10th July, P. M. at 4 o'clock. G. M. THACHER, Secretary.
